

98. “Convulsiveness”

AS I have look'd over the proof-sheets of the preceding pages, I have once or twice fear'd that my diary would prove, at best, but a batch of convulsively written reminiscences. Well, be it so. They are but parts of the actual distraction, heat, smoke and excitement of those times. The war itself, with the temper of society preceding it, can indeed be best described by that very word convulsiveness.

Revision #1

Created 20 August 2019 12:58:43 by Textpedia

Updated 20 August 2019 12:58:50 by Textpedia